Lawyers have always needed to understand algorithmic thinking in order to parse statutes, regulations, and other formal legal rules. As automation and big data shift our legal landscape, lawyers will also need a deeper set of technical computer skills. Coding for lawyers will introduce law students to the fundamentals of algorithmic thinking and design through the lens of computer programming. This is a class for complete beginners who have no prior coding knowledge. Students will gain hands-on experience tackling law-related automation problems. Students will be expected to complete coding related homework assignments and small projects.
